Middle School Summer Reading

Summer Reading

Becoming a proficient, lifelong reader will help you get ready to tackle any task put before you. Here's what researchers from the International Reading Association have said:

"Adolescents entering the adult world will do more reading and writing tasks than any other time in human history. They will need reading and writing to cope with the flood of information they will find in their world as it exists. They will also need to use literacy to feed their imaginations so that they can create the world of the future. In a complex and diverse world, their ability to read is crucial, and therefore, it is essential not only to help them survive, but also help them thrive."

Get into the habit of reading for enjoyment, too! Summer is a great time to do that. Here are a few suggestions that you might enjoy this summer.
