CASCADE HIGH SCHOOL NEWSLETTER

May 2022

VOLUME 5, ISSUE 9

From the Principal

Dear Cascade Families,

Spring is here! This shift in seasons tends to lighten everyone's mood a bit, particularly as we begin to see the sun more and begin to get outside more regularly. This time also indicates that the end of the school year is getting closer. These next seven weeks will be busy ones at Cascade. We will be starting this month giving more than 400 Advanced Placement exams for the first two weeks. During the second half of May our sophomores, juniors, and some seniors will be taking Smarter Balanced Assessments and the Washington Comprehensive Assessment of Science. All our students will be taking final exams in June. In between, there is amazing work going on in classrooms, and students are accomplishing amazing things across all subject areas, and across many different activities. On top of all the rigorous classwork and testing, students are involved in athletics, activities, and performances. Seniors are working to finish strong and making plans for their post-high school careers through apprenticeships, in the military, in technical and community colleges, and in universities.

All these events are energizing as our students have bright futures in front of them. At the same time, all of the activity in the spring can bring a great deal of stress. At Cascade, we've been focused on building positive relationships with students and creating a community where students can come to us if they are experiencing too much stress and need help coping, and it is our expectation that students have at least one staff member here at Cascade who they know would be there for them if they had a problem. Over these last few months, we want to prioritize our students. Therefore, if for any reason, if your student is struggling with the pressures and need help, you or your child can contact a staff member here. We will listen and provide support.

Thank you for your continued support of Cascade High School and all our students.

Sincerely,

Michael Takayoshi

Cascade Athletics

Our CHS athletes have received some nice press in the Everett Herald recently!

- Basketball player Devin Gilbert was chosen as the Everett Herald Athlete of the Month back in January
- Track and Field Athlete Lyle Pinaula was recently chosen as the Everett Herald Athlete of the Week for a long jump of 21 feet, 6.5 inches (3rd best jump in the state for 3A schools at that point in time). Congratulations!

Spring Sports are quickly wrapping up. At the time of this writing, we don't have a list, but many of our teams and individual athletes will be advancing to post-season play. All playoff brackets can be viewed at wescoathletics.com. Good luck to all our athletes that have advanced to post-season competition!

Are you planning to participate in a sport next year? Many of our sports programs will be holding practices over the summer, starting on May 31st and running through July. We will include a summer calendar in the June bulletin, and it will also be viewable on the Cascade website under athletics once it is finalized. These practices are open to all current Cascade students as well as any 8th grade students that will be attending Cascade in the fall. We hope to see all our athletes working hard this summer! To participate, you must have a current sports physical, just like you would for fall, winter, and spring sports.

Negotiating with Teens & Pre-Teens

Key points

- Negotiating with pre-teens and teenagers helps them learn how to communicate, compromise, and make good decisions.
- Negotiating can also be good for relationships with pre-teens and teenagers.
- Negotiations go well when you listen, talk, are clear about what and isn't negotiable, and stay positive.

Negotiating with teenagers: benefits

When you negotiate well with pre-teens and teenagers, it helps them learn how to:

- think through what they want and need
- communicate their wants and needs in a reasonable way
- understand other perspectives
- compromise
- make good decisions

Negotiating is also good for you and your relationship with your child. That's because negotiating is about communicating well, working together and finding solutions you can both accept.

Preparing for successful negotiations with pre-teens and teenagers

Sometimes you might know that a negotiation is coming. For example, your child might have been talking about a party their friends are going to. In this situation, you have time to get ready. You can think about what's important to you and what you can be flexible about. You could discuss the issue with your partner or a friend or write down what you want to say.

But sometimes you might not be ready for the negotiation, or you might need time to think about what you will and won't compromise on. For example, your child might say, 'I want to go to the movies on Saturday night'. Or if your child is older or more assertive, your child might say, 'I'm going to the movies tonight'.

If this happens and you don't feel ready to negotiate, it's OK to set a time to talk later. But make sure it's soon. This will help your child trust that you'll keep your word. It also tells your child that coming to a compromise is important to you. If it's an issue that needs another parent's input, set aside a time that allows you all to discuss the situation together.

Negotiation techniques to use with pre-teens and teenagers

Successful negotiating with teenagers has a lot to do with the negotiation techniques you use. Here are some negotiation techniques to use with your child.

Listening and talking during negotiations

- Use a calm, warm and firm voice to set the tone. The idea is to avoid getting into a conflict with your child. For example, you could say, 'Let's talk about this'.
- Actively listen to your child's views first without interrupting. For example, 'So you're saying that you really want to dye your hair pink for the dress-up party, even though it will stay that colour for a long time. You also know that it might wreck your hair a bit'.
- Express your views and ask your child to tell you more about theirs. For example, 'I want you to have fun and see your friends, but I also need to know you'll be safe. So, tell me more about the bike ride. What can we agree on to make sure you're safe?'
- Take a break if things get tense or you can't reach a compromise. For example, 'I need some time out, so let's work this out after dinner', or 'We don't seem to be getting anywhere. Let's both go away and think about this before we talk again'.

Reaching decisions, you can both accept

- Be clear about what is and isn't negotiable. Understanding your child's personality and maturity will help you decide on this. The level of trust you have in your child based on past events is also important. For example, 'I don't want you to travel home from the cinema on your own. How about I pick you up?'

- Think of a range of options. For example, ‘I don’t want you to paint your room black because it makes the house feel too dark. Is there another color you’d be happy with, or could you paint just one wall? What are your other ideas?’
- Be firm about your non-negotiables. For example, ‘It doesn’t matter what other people are doing. I’ll pick you up after the movie finishes’.
- Show that you’re willing to compromise and that you want to agree on something that you can both accept. For example, ‘I know you want to check social media, but you also need to finish your homework and get enough sleep. How much social media time do you think is OK after you allow time for homework and sleep?’

When you’ve reached a decision: next steps

- Clearly state the decision that you and your child have agreed on. For example, ‘OK. You can go to the party with your friends. I’ll pick you up at 11 pm’. Your child might be unhappy with the decision. Give your child time to accept it without trying to convince them of its benefits.
- Discuss and agree on the consequences if the agreement is broken. For example, ‘We’ve agreed that you can paint one wall in your room black. We’ve also agreed that if you paint any more than that, you’ll have to buy the white paint yourself and paint the walls white again. OK?’
- End on a positive note even if the negotiation wasn’t perfect. For example, ‘Thanks for talking that through with me. I appreciate that we were able to work things out in the end. It shows me that you’re a mature person’.
- Notice when your child sticks to the agreement and praise them. For example, ‘Thank you for making sure you were home by 11 pm. I appreciate the fact that you stuck to our agreement. I’ll feel comfortable the next time you want to go out’.

If there are two parents in the family, it helps to support each other’s views when you’re using these negotiation techniques. This puts you in a stronger position and keeps the negotiation simpler. You might need to negotiate with each other privately first to come to a joint position.

Using your authority when negotiating

As your child develops, using your authority and influence in a respectful and positive way will help keep your relationship strong and open.

As your child moves into older adolescence, it’s still important to use your authority to protect your child’s safety and wellbeing. For example, it’s OK for you to stand firm on knowing where your child is going, when they’ll be coming home and when they need to call you about changes to arrangements.

You might find that your child is challenging your authority more as they get older. For example, your child might say, ‘I am going to do that and you can’t stop me’. The way you respond might depend on your child’s age.

For example, if your child is 12 years old, you might say, ‘As your parent I’m responsible for your safety, but I want to help you get what you want too. Let’s talk more and try to work it out’.

But if your child is 16 years old, you might say, ‘I want to support you in doing what you want, but I’m still responsible for your safety. So, I need to know where you’re going and who you’re with. Let’s talk more about this to see if we can find a solution we’re both happy with.’

Programa de inmersión al español con lenguaje dual

El programa de inmersión al español con lenguaje dual (en inglés como “dual-language Spanish immersion program”) de la escuela primaria de Emerson es una opción disponible para el otoño 2022. Las familias con niños y niñas que van a ingresar al kínder tienen la opción de elegir seguir el programa con lenguaje dual. Este programa le da a los alumnos de primaria una oportunidad de poder completar el plan de estudios de Everett Public Schools de una manera excitante y no tradicional de poder estar inmersos en el idioma español y su cultura desde el kínder hasta el 12vo grado. Los alumnos en el programa tendrán dominio del idioma inglés y del español aprendiendo el mismo plan de estudios que sus compañeros que no están en este programa.

Se le da prioridad a los estudiantes que viven dentro de la zona de asistencia escolar de la escuela primaria Emerson. Si un número elevado de estudiantes aplica, se realizará un sorteo para seleccionar a los estudiantes. Si la clase no se llena con alumnos de la zona de asistencia escolar de Emerson, se hará un sorteo adicional para alumnos fuera de la zona de asistencia escolar. Contamos con más información en www.everettsd.org/DualLanguageSpanish.
