Literature Review Templates:

How to Present What 'They' Say

The following templates help writers introduce and discuss sources ('they') when writing a literature review. Additionally, these templates help writers summarize and synthesize the arguments and ideas of their sources in order to help the writer establish creditability and provide a solid background for a research paper or project.

THEY SAY: Reporting what authors are saying about a topic

VERB TENSE & SOURCES

- > APA: In APA, when you discuss cited sources, you are required to use PAST TENSE (e.g., Smith argued) or PRESENT PERFECT TENSE (e.g., Smith [and Jones] has [have] argued). See pg. 33 in the APA Manual for more information.
- MLA: Generally, in MLA, when you discuss cited sources, use PRESENT TENSE (e.g. Smith believes). PRESENT PERFECT TENSE can also be used, but definitively there are no rules for verb tense and sources in the MLA Handbook.

Conventional wisdom has it that

Many students assume that

The standard way of thinking about topic X has been_____.

Frame Every Quote

Since quotations do not speak for themselves, you need to build a frame around them in which you do that speaking for them. You need to make a 'quotation sandwich' [Introduction-quotation-explanation]. Introduce the quotation adequately by explaining who is speaking and setting up what the quotation says. Then follow up with explaining why you consider the quotation important and what you take it to say. [The () represents the placement of your in-text citation.]

For introducing quotations

APA X (year) stated, "_____" (p. #). As the prominent researcher/scholar X (year) put it, "____" (p. #). According to X (year), "____" (p. #). X (year) himself wrote, "____" (p. #). In her book, ____, X (year) maintained that "____" (p. #). MLA In X's view, "____" (page #). X agrees when she writes, "___" (page #). X disagrees when he writes, "____" (page #). X complicates matters further when she writes, "____" (page #).

		Basically, X is saying
	\triangleright	In other words, X believes
		In making this comment, X argues that
		X is insisting that
	\triangleright	X's point is that

> The essence of X's argument is that ______.

DO NOT introduce quotations by saying something like "X asserts an idea that" or "A quote by X says." Introductory phrases like these are both redundant and misleading.

Templates to Declare the Writer's Position: How to Present What 'I' Say

The following templates help writers introduce and discuss your own ideas as a writer ('1') when writing a paper that requires the writer's response to or stance/position on a topic. Furthermore, these templates help writers agree, disagree, or both agree and disagree with sources in order to declare their position relative to the views they've summarized or quoted.

I SAY: a writer offering his/her own argument as a response to what 'they' said

Experienced writers know how to express their thoughts. Since academic writing, broadly speaking, is argumentative, college writers need to argue well. Thus, writers need to be able to assert their own ideas as well as enter the ongoing conversation (they say) of a topic and use the ideas of others as a launching pad for furthering their ideas. Many times the use of "I" is appropriate; however, check with your professor.

Signaling who is Saying What in Your Own Writing

"I" can be used in well-grounded and well supported arguments just as those that don't use "I". Some occasions may warrant avoiding first person ("I"). Overuse of "I" can also result in a monotonous series of "I" statements—"I believe, I think, I argue". It is a good idea to mix first-person assertions with assertions that signal your position without using "I".
